Quinn looks to increase MAP grants

CHRISTY STEWART
Daily Egyptian

In the annual State of the State address last week, Gov. Pat Quinn announced his plan to double the number of Monetary Award Program grants available to Illinois students.

Quinn said the need-based MAP grants help 140,000 students go to college in Illinois. He said increasing these numbers will help mobilize the education system behind his administration’s goal to ensure at least 60 percent of the state’s adult workforce will have a degree or career certificate by 2025.

“By doubling the number of MAP scholarships, we can make sure deserving students in need are equipped to excel in the 21st century workplace,” Quinn said during the address.

Some area politicians have questioned Quinn’s statements, wondering how the governor plans to fit the increased funding into the state’s already tight budget.

Democratic State Rep. Brandon Phelps said he is in favor of the move, but he needs additional clarification about how the state will finance the increased number of scholarships.

“That’s the million dollar question,” he said. “I am totally for doubling the number of MAP grants, but I want to make sure we don’t take away from other parts of the community to fund it.”

Phelps said he is scheduled to meet with members of Quinn’s administration this week to further discuss the issue.

MAP grants are disbursed to Illinois students based on a number of eligibility requirements, including Free Application for Federal Student Aid information.

MAP grants are not loans and students do not have to repay them.

In the 2012-13 school year, SIU had 4,151 students who received MAP grants. These grants totaled more than $14.5 million according to Rae Goldsmith, chief marketing and communications officer at SIU.

“MAP grants help Illinois residents with tuition and fees,” Goldsmith said. “Any increase in the MAP program would help our students.”

In order to be eligible, a student must provide proof of citizenship, be an Illinois resident and maintain satisfactory academic progress as determined by the student’s approved Illinois college. Some non-citizens are also eligible.

A student’s eligibility for a MAP grant is determined upon completion of the FAFSA. To apply, students should fill out the FAFSA as soon as possible after Jan. 1 for the following academic year.

According to the Illinois Student Assistance Commission, the amount of each student’s grant award is determined by several factors such as calculating financial need, tuition costs and the number of credit hours for which a student is enrolled.

MAP grants are primarily funded by the state of Illinois and are paid directly to the colleges attended by MAP grant award recipients.

Dive into ROTC workouts

SARAH SCHNEIDER • DAILY EGYPTIAN

Reserve Officer Training Corps cadet Joshua Kocemba, a sophomore from Lisle studying biological sciences, falls into the pool Thursday at the Edward J Shea Natatorium during the submerged equipment removal portion of the Combat Water Survival Test. Individual cadets sang songs including “Party in the USA” and “Sweet Caroline” before being pushed in the pool holding a rubber rifle and wearing an equipment vest. To pass the test required for all soldiers and officers, cadets had to remove the equipment without getting tangled.

Student emails accessible to all

TIA RINEHART
Daily Egyptian

In a recent article concerning the accessibility of student email addresses, questions were raised regarding the methods companies use to obtain student information.

Students can request their directory information be kept private. However, unless they send the request, it could legally be accessed by anyone, said David Crain, assistant provost and chief information officer. He said retrieving student emails could be done in different ways. The emails are considered “directory information” and are legally accessible by anyone, he said.

“Local businesses can access student email two different ways,” he said. “First, they can simply get them from the People Finder tool on SIU’s website. There are even automated software tools that help extract email addresses from websites.” Crain said he is unsure of the names of the software tools, but typing the words “email harvester” or “email spiders” into a search engine can find them.

Miller seeks City Council position

ADRIAN MILLER

KYLE SUTTON
Daily Egyptian

Current Undergraduate Student Government President, Adrian Miller has announced he will pursue the vacant position on the Carbondale City Council.

The council will begin accepting applications from community members interested in filling the position Feb. 4.

The vacancy stems from outgoing Mayor Joel Fritzler’s resignation Jan. 13. Don Monty has been selected to serve the rest of Fritzler’s term, beginning Feb. 4.

Miller, a lifelong resident of Carbondale, is a 22-year-old junior studying political science and has been involved in public service for most of his life.

“I feel now is the time I can give back to my community,” Miller said. “If the council feels I am an adequate person to serve on that council, I would be more than honored to take up that call and serve the citizens of Carbondale.”

Hoffman found dead in apartment

JAKE COYLE
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Philip Seymour Hoffman, who won the Oscar for his portrayal of writer Truman Capote and created a gallery of slackers, charlatans and other characters so vivid that he was regarded as one of the world’s finest actors, was found dead in his apartment Sunday with what officials said was a needle in his arm. He was 46.

The actor apparently died, of a drug overdose, said two law enforcement officials, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the case. Envelopes containing what was believed to be heroin were found with him, they said.

Hoffman — with his doughy, everyman physique, his often-disheveled look and his limp, receding blond hair — was a character actor of such range and lack of vanity that he could seemingly handle roles of any size, on the stage and in movies that played in art houses or multiplexes.

He could play comic or dramatic, loathsome or sympathetic, trembling or diabolical, dissipated or tightly controlled, slovenly or fastidious.

The stage-trained actor’s rumpled naturalism brought him four Academy Award nominations — for “Capote,” “The Master,” “Doubt” and “Charlie Wilson’s War” — and three Tony nominations for his work on Broadway, including his portrayal of the beaten and weary Willy Loman in “Death of a Salesman.”

Hoffman spoke candidly over the years about his struggles with drug addiction. After 23 years sober, he admitted in interviews last year to falling off the wagon and developing a heroin problem that led to a stint in rehab.

“No words for this. He was too great and we’re too shattered,” said Mike Nichols, who directed Hoffman in “Charlie Wilson’s War” and “Death of a Salesman.”

The law enforcement officials said Hoffman’s body was discovered in a bathroom in his Greenwich Village apartment by his assistant and a friend who made the 911 call.

For much of the day, a police crime-scene van was parked out front, and technicians carrying brown paper bags went in and out. Police kept a growing crowd of onlookers back. A single red daisy had been placed in front of the lobby door.

On Sunday night, a black body bag was carried out on a stretcher, loaded into the back of a medical examiner’s van and driven away.

Hoffman’s family called the news “tragic and sudden.” Hoffman is survived by his partner of 15 years, Mimi O’Donnell, and their three children.

“We are devastated by the loss of our beloved Phil and appreciate the outpouring of love and support we have received from everyone,” the family said in a statement.

Carbondale Public Library to celebrate Black History Month

KIA SMITH
Daily Egyptian

The Carbondale Public Library is holding a series of lectures to celebrate Black History Month.

The lectures will take place each Tuesday in February. They start at 6 p.m. and run until 7:30.

Jeffrey Sheppard, a library employee, said the events are designed to be a celebration rather than lamenting on past atrocities.

“The event was created to focus on the celebration of African-American history rather than the hatred of the past,” he said. “I not only want to see a good turnout for this event, but I also want this event to build awareness and see the community and college get more involved with each other.”

Today’s lecture features local residents and civic leaders Milton McDaniel and Melvin “Pepper” Holder. McDaniel and Holder will discuss their experience of being black in southern Illinois and the changes they have witnessed over the years.

Novotny Lawrence, an associate professor in the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts, will speak Feb. 11 about race and media and how stereotypes of blacks have dominated the media for decades.

Local minister and professor the Rev. Joseph Brown and professor Robert Fox will discuss the contributions made by black writers and scholars to black literature on Feb. 18.

The last lecture on Feb. 25 will feature associate professor Leonard Gadzekpo and Brown mediating a discussion on the contributions Africana studies have made to the world and the benefits they provide to individuals within the curriculum.

ROTC holds water survival tests

LUKE NOZICKA
Daily Egyptian

Some may say jumping off an almost 33 foot high platform is intimidating, but doing it blindfolded while holding a gun is just another average day for an ROTC cadet.

The university's Reserve Officer Training Corps, commonly know as the ROTC, underwent the Combat Water Survival Test Thursday at the Edward J. Shea Natorium.

"All soldiers and officers must pass the swimming test," Lt. Col. Jon Sowards said. "This is just part of the normal training regimen we do."

Sowards said the first part of the swimming test was two weeks ago. Cadets had to swim in a t-shirt and shorts for 10 continuous minutes and show they could tread water for five.

"Once they pass that part they move on to the second part which is the Combat Water Survival Test," he said. "There are basically four different things they do in the Water Survival Test."

The first portion of the test is a basic swimming assessment. Cadets swim a minimum of 25 meters wearing the Army combat uniform while carrying a rubber rifle above water.

The rifle weighs about seven pounds and was used for three of the four events.

"It's heavy enough to cause you some mental stress trying to keep it up out of the water," Sowards said. "But it's really not that bad."

After the swimming portion, cadets underwent the Submerged Equipment Removal Test. The test required cadets to take off all their gear while underwater.

The third portion of the test is a diving test, in which all cadets jump off the 10-meter diving board holding the dummy gun while blindfolded.

"It's a confidence drill is what it is," Sowards said. "When they do it and they come up they're incredibly confident at that point."

Alex Golman, a freshman cadet studying architecture from Chicago, said if a cadet dropped his or her rifle, they would have to retrieve it from the bottom of the pool and attempt the jump again.

Hubert Widener, an ROTC squad leader and a senior studying aviation technology from Zero Beach, Fla., said the test is meant to simulate landing in water at nighttime.

"They're all simulations for usually if you're in a combat situation if you fall either in a ditch or you're in a vehicle and you end up in water," Widener said. "This is usually done twice a year, usually at the beginning of each semester."

Sowards said the CWST is a requirement for all cadets to pass in order to graduate from the program.

Mike and Anita Elmore attended at the event to swear in their son Matthew Elmore, a junior studying English from Chicago. Military is a tradition in the Elmore family. Mike is a sergeant major stationed in Fort Campbell, Ky., and their oldest son is stationed in the Air Force in South Korea.

"We're going to go up to the top of the platform and swear him in and after that I'll push him out into the water," Mike Elmore said. "It'll be a good thing. I don't think too many parents get to do that."

Mike said unexpectedly pushing his son off the high dive was a fun way to celebrate the occasion.

Swimming and diving Coach Rick Walker said he supports the ROTC coming to use the pool even if it sometimes conflicts with swim practice.

"I am a huge fan of the military," he said. "And so anything we can do to help them and assist them in their training, we're on board."

Widener said around a quarter of cadets who go through the water-training struggle to finish. Walker said the swim team offers to help train cadets who struggle in the water.

Troy Vaughn, director of recreational sports and services, said the Recreation Center works with the swim team and ROTC to reserve the pool. He said their training is well supervised and safe.

"You know, honestly it scares me to death thinking I'm going to jump into the water full pack, full gear and the whole bit," he said. "But I've never seen an issue with it."

Although his position at SIU would make him an ambassador for the university, Miller said his main concern would be to serve the community first.

"Carbondale as a community is truly unique," he said. "This community had a great deal in raising me."

City council member and owner of Fat Patties Lance Jack said he is excited Miller has decided to submit his application for city council.

"The community has long-wanted at times more student involvement and representation in the city," Jack said. "I think it would be a good idea to have someone of Adrian's qualifications and caliber on the city council."

Jack said he will look at Miller's qualifications as seriously as anyone else applying.

"He has been around town and he knows what is going on," Jack said. "He has a good feel, not just for the student population, but for some of the business needs in Carbondale."

Miller is a graduate of Carbondale Community High School where he served as class president for four years. Along with serving as the elected president of the USG, Miller also serves as a board member for the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The IBHE represents students from public, private and for-profit universities, Miller said.

"It has given me a lot of perspective into state politics but also into issues like pensions and higher education dealing with the $3.4 billion budget the IBHE oversees," he said.

He said his work with USG has prepared him to take on the task of being a city council member.

"This year alone in USG, we have passed solid finance reform," he said. "We have brought the organization up a notch to the point where people know about USG, and people are participating in the process and those things have not happened in the past."

Bob Brewer, 76, a life-long Carbondale community member and former assistant bursar for the university, said he met Miller when he was in high school. Brewer said he knew from the moment he met Miller, he saw him going places.

"I think he is the type of person that would represent many areas on the city council between the university community, whether it be students or administration, and also individuals in the Carbondale community," Brewer said. "I have nothing but praise for him."

Miller said his willingness to work with others and his attention to detail would greatly help him serve the City of Carbondale.

"I believe the success I have overseen here, because of the great team I have had, my ability to work as a team player, my understanding of budgets and my drive and passion to serve my community are great reasons why I think the council should consider my application," Miller said.

Miller said the city budget is the main issue currently facing the council, but other prominent issues cannot go unnoticed.

“Second, they can make a Freedom of Information Act request to the University,” he said. “And the university has to provide them with this information under state law.”

Two companies students received emails from, clusterflunk.com and DateMySchool.com, declined to comment on how they access emails. Representatives did not respond to requests for interviews.

Crain said SIU condensed its email from 35 systems to one: Microsoft Outlook.

He said there should be no difference in spam emails from the old email system and the new email system.

“All of the emails were already on the website so the change to a new system would not impact how easy they are to get,” he said.

Schylar Stramaglia, a junior from Bloomingdale studying occupational therapy, said spam emails to her siu.edu account occurred more frequently after the transfer to Outlook.

“I don’t even know what half of my emails are,” she said.

Vilda Konopulli, a freshman from Addison studying business marketing, said she believes there has been an increase in spam as well.

“I am always getting spam offering me jobs that will earn me ridiculous amounts of money,” she said.

Crain said there should be no difference in the amount of spam mail. Students are assuming it is because of the move to Outlook when it is just an overall increase in spam to universities, he said.

Every email system uses their own spam filter and if you compare spam percentages, the old and new systems are roughly the same, Crain said.

“Spam kind of ebbs and flows across the Internet and there will be times when we get a lot more spam,” he said. “In fact, one of the things we’ve noticed just this academic year is we have been getting a lot more targeted toward Southern Illinois University and our students but that’s happening to every university.”

Crain said SIU’s policy on directory information is online at policies.siu.edu/other_policies/chapter3/rlseinfo.html.

Wal-Mart, Amazon show change

MAE ANDERSON
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — The financial strains and shifting shopping habits of Americans have led to uneven fortunes for retailers.

Traditional consumer companies like Wal-Mart and Mattel have continued to struggle as Americans spend more cautiously in the uncertain economy. But Amazon.com has flourished as shoppers increasingly buy online rather than head to stores.

The trend was evident during the pivotal holiday shopping season, a time roughly from November through December when many retailers can make up to 40 percent of their annual revenue. Overall, government figures show spending during October through December rose at the fastest clip in three years.

But exactly where — and how — Americans spent their money during the final months of the year shifted. Fewer people were in and out of stores during the holiday season, but more were shopping online.

Online shopping rose 10 percent to $46.5 billion in November and December, according to research firm Comscore. Meanwhile, sales at stores rose just 2.7 percent to $265.9 billion, according to ShopperTrak, which tracks data at 40,000 stores in the U.S. And the number of customers in stores dropped 14.6 percent.

“Consumer behavior evolved quickly, as retail foot traffic fell, while online purchases grew,” said Mattel’s CEO, Bryan Stockton, in a call with investors Friday.

Mattel, the world’s largest toy maker, announced that results for the quarter, which included the holiday shopping season, missed both analysts’ estimates and the company’s own expectations because of weak sales of Barbie and other toys. “From my perspective, the 2013 holiday period has to be one of the most transformative I have seen,” Stockton said.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. also expects disappointing results. On Friday, the world’s largest retailer said its fiscal fourth-quarter and full-year adjusted earnings from continuing operations may come in at or slightly below the low end of its prior forecasts.

Chief Financial Officer Charles Holley in part blamed a bigger-than-expected impact from the federal government’s reduction in Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program benefits that went into effect on Nov. 1, which pressured its primarily low-income consumers.

Wal-Mart is among 33 major retailers that have lowered their outlooks for the fourth quarter and beyond, mostly because of the disappointing holiday shopping season, according to Ken Perkins, president of RetailMetrics LLC., a research firm.

“A highly competitive environment is going to be staring (retailers) in the face throughout the course of 2014; the pressure and competition are not going to abate at all,” Perkins said.

Paradoxically, Amazon said late Thursday that its profit and revenue both grew in the latest quarter. Still, the world’s largest online retailer said its results fell below what Wall Street was expecting as costs rose in tandem with revenue.

But Amazon faces different problems than its bricks-and-mortar peers. Amazon’s results were hurt because its costs are rising along with its meteoric revenue growth.

SIU lacks fire drill etiquette

ADIE APPLGATE
Daily Egyptian

Recently, residents of Schneider Hall were forced to deal with two very inappropriately timed drills.

If one were to make a schedule of polite times for a fire drill, 2 a.m. or 4 a.m. in January would not be listed for several reasons.

One: Some people have morning classes. Unfortunately we can't all have schedules that give us time to sleep in.

Some people must wake up at 7 a.m. to walk from Schneider Hall to the Mass Communications building.

For these people, fire drills at 2 a.m. are especially unpleasant and make them lose all motivation to attend that first class.

Windburn is not a good way to start a day, and the lack of sleep on top of that does not inspire a person to get out of bed.

Two: It is three degrees outside. If it were August, and the fire alarm sounded without an actual fire, I would be displeased.

However, it would be warm so I would get over it. This is inopportune weather to shove people onto the street.

Some of these people wore pajamas, allowing body heat to escape quickly, and some yelled obscenities because they are cold.

When they yell these obscenities, policemen walk around with canisters of mace.

Three: It is about common decency.

We cannot control time or temperature, but we can control ourselves. During drills, students crowd around outside the towers. Mae Smith, Neely and Schneider residents find huddles of friends and try to stay warm.

As students talk in their huddles, they speculate about the rumor that the drill was a prank. If the rumor is true, whoever is responsible should think about their actions.

They not only caused many people to lose needed sleep, but they have also shown common courtesy is a dying art.

People should be more considerate in a place where everyone is stressed and potentially overwhelmed. College is a time that challenges you more than you ever thought possible.

It drains you on a daily basis, but it rewards you at the same time.

Every college student knows relying on others helps relieve stress, so be someone people can rely on. Don't do immature things such as defecating in an end lounge. Don't speed while driving over a crosswalk. Finally, don't pull a fire alarm at 2 a.m..

If these drills were pranks, whoever is responsible should do the tower-dwellers a favor and leave, because he or she is unprepared to attend an institute of higher education.

Summer Camp heats up Hangar

JAKE SAUNDERS
Daily Egyptian

With winter persisting, Hangar 9 helped push toward Summer Camp this weekend.

The Summer Camp Music Festival, an annual event in Chillicothe, made an early stop through Carbondale Saturday night with its “On the Road” tour. The tour’s focus is to find local acts and give them the opportunity to play at the festival, taking place May 23-25.

Jason Miles, tour director, said this is the fifth year the festival has travelled in search of bands to fill vacancies in the May lineup.

“We’re trying to see how many spots we have open at Summer Camp every year, and we want to draw in regional bands and bring in more of a regional touch to the festival,” he said.

Each year, tour members seek out bands they might already recognize, or that might be popular around the area. They gather information and set up a venue where the bands may present their talent.

“We pick 12 to 16 hotspots every year where the music seems to be really happening,” Miles said. “So everybody who wins each one of these, there’s one person from each night that gets a paid gig at Summer Camp Music Festival.”

Orismo, Copectic, Soul Census and The Big Idea were the four bands that performed Saturday. Following a series of performances between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m., Soul Census was chosen as the local artist to join the festival adventure.

“All the bands that are playing tonight are extremely talented. I enjoy them all,” Gossman said. “Soul Census takes the cake for me and it’s great that Summer Camp is giving them the opportunity to do this.”

The final decision was made through a balloting system where, upon entry, each audience member was given a ticket to vote for a band. Tina Grabow, a tour assistant, said she was excited to help bring the event together.

“We’re trying to see how many spots we have open at Summer Camp every year, and we want to draw in regional bands and bring in more of a regional touch to the festival. We pick 12-16 hotspots every year where the music seems to be really happening.”

—Jason Miles
“On the Road” tour director

“In my opinion, music is the only thing that really brings people together in an honest way,” she said. “I take pride in bringing local talent to a broader spectrum.”

Miles said the tour will make 14 stops this year and choose 14 bands to fill the void at Summer Camp. Grabow said the tour has made three stops so far this year.

“We’re going as far east as West Virginia, [west to] Des Moines, we’re doing our finale in Chicago of two nights, two nights in Colorado, Mizzou, Michigan,” she said. “We go north, south, east and west, we go all over.”

However competitive things may become, the tour still encourages community members to take a closer look at area music while promoting the larger acts that share the main stages at Summer Camp, Miles said.

“Hopefully, this draws some people from the Carbondale community, or whatever community we’re in, up to Summer Camp to see the show,” he said.

Ryan Harper, lead guitarist for the band Orismo, performs Saturday at Hangar 9 for a chance to perform at Summer Camp Music Festival. The festival is scheduled for May 23-25 at Three Sisters Park in Chillicothe, said Jason Miles, director of the music festival. “Carbondale has always been a great artistic community,” Miles said. “We try to go look for talent where the scene is at.” Soul Census was the band picked to perform at the Summer Camp Music Festival.

Reitman’s “Labor Day” a chore to sit through

KARSTEN BURGSTAHLER
Daily Egyptian

Hollywood romances need two actors with chemistry to work. It does not matter what other lessons the movie wants to teach. If the romance is central to the plot and falls flat, the movie is considered a dud.

Jason Reitman’s “Labor Day” (Rated PG-13; 111 Min.) is one such dud. Perhaps more mercy could be given to the film if it were from a first time writer/director.

But Reitman, director of heralded films such as “Up in the Air” and “Juno,” knows better, and that is what makes “Labor Day” so confounding. Reitman has a signature style using punchy characters and unique situations to explore characters on the fringes of society. “Up in the Air” makes a likeable guy who fires people for a living; “Thank You For Smoking” makes a spokesperson for Big Tobacco the protagonist; “Juno” gives a heart to a girl who would otherwise be looked down upon for becoming pregnant as a teenager.

“Labor Day” employs this type of character development as it attemptsto make a convict likeable, but its pursuit of. This goal is flawed from the beginning. The movie follows Henry (Gattlin Griffith), a boy who had to step in and be strong for his mother, Adele (Kate Winslet), after his father leaves them. Adele has become so frightened of the outside world that she rarely leaves her home, and when she does, she needs Henry by her side.

One day while shopping, a wounded man named Frank (Josh Brolin) takes Henry hostage and quietly forces Adele to take him to her house. Frank has escaped from prison and hides inside Adele’s house, and the damaged Frank and Adele strike up a romance.

Reitman tries to build a new family out of these circumstances, allowing Frank to take the place of Henry’s father and suggesting they can begin anew. “Labor Day” wants to be a movie about fathers and sons, and in some of these scenes classic Reitman emerges.

But unlike Reitman’s other films, he doesn’t have an enthusiastic cast to drive the heavy premise. He lets the romance become so cheesy it overpowers any other nuanced relationships the script places in front of the audience. Neither Winslet nor Brolin seems incredibly interested to be here, and their romance feels so forced there is no enjoyment to be had in their unique relationship. It is such a stoic film that audiences will lose interest rather quickly.

When the romance is not boring socks off, it actually takes some plot turns. It so desperately wants to be sexy but actually come off rather creepy. After he has untied Adele, Frank helps Henry and her make a peach pie. The camera closely follows his hands as he guides Adele’s hands through the crust and into the bowl of peaches. But because the audience knows he just threatened her life and had her tied up, its pretty hard to believe there is an actual flame here — Stockholm Syndrome is more like it — and “Labor Day”’s erotic undertones move the film further from the story about fathers and sons it could have been focused on otherwise.

“Labor Day” has an interesting underlying plot to play with, but it collapses around Adele and Frank’s laughable romance. Hollywood should take note: Unless it has a stellar script, do not pair up Brolin and Winslet. Ever.

Punxsutawney Phil predicts longer winter

GENE J. PUSKAR
Associated Press

Emerging from his lair on Super Bowl Sunday, groundhog Punxsutawney Phil could not predict the winner of the big game but, his handlers said he was sure of his weather forecast: There will be six more weeks of winter.

Pennsylvania’s famed groundhog was roused from slumber at 7:28 a.m. Sunday and, according to the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club, directed handler Bill Deeley to a scroll that contained the prediction — along with a Super Bowl reference.

As usual, thousands of fans turned out on Groundhog Day to see the furry rodent, the most famous of a small group of groundhogs said to forecast the weather.

Legend has it that if the groundhog sees his shadow on Feb. 2, winter will last another month-and-a-half. If he does not see it, spring will come early.

In reality, Phil’s prediction is decided ahead of time by a group called the Inner Circle, whose members don top hats and tuxedos for the annual ceremony on Gobbler’s Knob, the tiny hill in the town for which he is named about 65 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

The prediction fell on Super Bowl Sunday for the first time. The closest the game previously came to coinciding with Groundhog Day was in 2009, when the just-down-the-road Pittsburgh Steelers defeated the Arizona Cardinals 27-23 the night before Phil’s forecast.

This year’s NFL championship pitting the Seattle Seahawks and Denver Broncos at MetLife Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., will be the Super Bowl’s 48th installment, while Phil has been predicting the weather since 1886.

In a nod to the game, Phil’s forecast came in the form of a Super Bowl-themed poem:

“A Super Bowl winner I will not predict,But my weather forecast, you cannot contradict,That’s not a football lying beside me. It’s my shadow you see. So, six more weeks of winter it shall be!”

This year’s Groundhog Day celebration marks a winter that has brought extreme cold to vast stretches of the country, including areas of the South wholly unaccustomed to severe winter weather. A snow and ice storm paralyzed Atlanta and other Southern cities last week.

Phil has now seen his shadow 101 times while failing to see it 17 times, according to the Inner Circle. There are no records for the remaining years.

Behind the “Horror”

MATT DARAY • FOR THE DAILY EGYPTIAN

Tyler Oranger, a junior from Marengo studying radio-television, prepares to show “The Rocky Horror Picture Show” at the Student Center Saturday as first-time viewers of the movie are Saran wrapped to each other below. Sara Vicente, a graduate student from Chicago studying educational psychology, and a member of the Student Programming Council, said the organization has been showing the movie every year for almost 30 years. Vicente said the movie is still shown because of the film’s cult following and how proactive the audience becomes in the experience. First time viewers of the film are marked with a red “V” on their foreheads and members of the crowd dress up as characters from the movie as part of the viewing experience.

Gagliano said it was unbelievable to get the call from athletic director Mario Moccia that he was named a Saluki hall of famer.

"It's the best SIU has to offer," he said. "To be included in that is humbling."

It was not the normal answer for Gagliano when asked what his favorite memory was at SIU. Most would say teammates or plays they made, but Gagliano said it was meeting his wife. He brought her back to the place where they met at the Student Center and proposed to her after six years of dating.

"That's my life, that's pretty special," Gagliano said.

Mickey Maule was the third SIU men's tennis player to win the Missouri Valley Conference No. 1 singles championship. Maule ranks first in SIU history in singles wins with 112 and doubles wins with 44.

Maule has not been back on the SIU campus in more than 20 years. He said the new football field sits on the tennis courts where he used to play.

"I think being gone so long and not coming back makes it more impactful," he said.

While climbing the tennis ranks, Maule said he played against Andre Agassi twice but was not able to beat him either time.

Maule works for Babolat, a company that produces tennis rackets around the world.

Brittany Riley is the current world record holder in the weight throw and was a six-time All-American during her time as a Saluki.

Riley said she did not know she had broken the world record the first time she broke it and it took 15 minutes for the judges to confirm she had.

"When they came back and announced it, I was pretty excited," Riley said.

Joe Schley is Saluki baseball's all-time hit leader with 286 hits in his career. He ranks in the top ten in several other categories as well.

Schley played for SIU from 1996-99 and played for the late Dan Callahan.

"Coach Callahan was a great man on and off the field," Schley said. "He didn't treat anyone any differently."

Amarachi Ukabam was not present at the presentation, however Moccia uncovered her plaque. Ukabam was a six-time All-American in the shot put, weight throw and discus.

The inductees were honored during halftime of the men's basketball 81-76 win over Loyola University Saturday.

Jones completed the Indiana Relays with a personal best jump of six feet. He also secured his fifth-ranked spot in the MVC.

Junior mid-distance runner Mobola Rotibi had a personal best record, but finished in second. Rotibi completed the open mile with a time of 4:59.64, the seventh-best time in MVC.

Rotibi continued to compete well the next day, this time winning the 800-meter run with a time of 2:14.61.

The Saluki said she is used to shorter races, but with longer races she is able to be in her own zone as she competes.

"Everything that we worked hard for is being shown in our meets and results so I'm pretty content with it," Rotibi said. "I want to do better, and I want to do the best I can because I know I can run faster and do a little bit better."

Rotibi said she is excited about the home meet this weekend and will hopefully have her family, friends and professors in the crowd.

"It's more calming running at home because I know the track, I know its curves, I know who's there, and I know who I'm running with," she said. "Versus away where you don't know where you can warm up or cool down, it's two totally different things but I like them both because they're both challenging in their own ways."

The Salukis will host the SIU Invitational Friday and Saturday at the Recreation Center. The meet is open to only NCAA Division I schools and will be scored. The Salukis will begin their field events on Friday at 4p.m.

"It will be good to have people come out and actually see us perform," Rotibi said. "It should be a good turnout."

Women’s tennis has a sluggish start to season

TYLER DIXON
Daily Egyptian

The SIU women’s tennis team opened its season Saturday at the University of Arkansas and went winless against two nationally ranked teams.

No. 49 Arkansas defeated SIU 7-0 and No. 63 University of North Texas swept the Salukis, 4-0. Coach Audra Anderson attributed the losses to the stiff competition and inexperience. Both Arkansas and North Texas played in tournaments prior to the Salukis season opener.

“It was our first match and Arkansas’ 6th match,” Anderson said. “The first match you have is not going to be your best tennis. You’re going to have the nerves and you’re just not going to play your best.”

Anderson admitted the winless weekend was a disappointing start for the team that had just set an SIU record for season wins, but said the team started to play better as the day progressed.

Freshman Megan Monaghan said she saw improvement in the team as well.

“Arkansas is so tough, so we started a little slow, but we got it going against North Texas,” she said. “We stepped it up and gave them some good matches.”

Arkansas sophomore Kimberly Ann-Surin, who competed in the U.S Open, and sophomore Yang Pang, who defeated three nationally ranked opponents during the fall season, lead the team.

Anderson said she expects to see Arkansas fair well in the Southeastern Conference this year and said the high level of competition was good for SIU.

“Arkansas is very good. They have a great chance to go to the NCAA tournament as a team,” she said. “They’ve got a nationally ranked doubles team, at least one, and they have two players who are nationally ranked in singles. We want to play teams like that.”

Anderson said the Salukis should expect to face teams like Arkansas and North Texas this year because of last years’ success, which will better prepare the team for conference play.

“I told the team this is the level we need to be at,” Anderson said. “After a year like we had last year, we’re scheduling tougher teams.”

After losing the set of matches to Arkansas, they had a two-hour break to make adjustments. SIU then played North Texas and Anderson said the team played better.

Junior Natasha Tomishima said she also saw the improvement in the team’s play. Tomishima, a contender for conference titles in single and doubles this year, dropped her first match against Pang, but was leading her second match.

After Tomishima took the first set 6-4, the second set was tied at 3-3, but Arkansas had acquired enough points to win the singles portion of the tournament, and all singles play ended.

The same thing happened during Tomishima’s doubles match with partner, senior Korey Love.

“Me and Korey couldn’t finish the doubles, but I felt like we started playing well,” Tomishima said. “We started playing better and we were coming back, so it was good. I wished we could have finished though.”

They had taken the first set 6-4 before officials ended the match.

“If we would have kept playing we would have won two matches, if not three,” Anderson said. “But North Texas had to drive back home so they called it when [Arkansas] won.”

With four freshmen expected to get playing time, Anderson said the experience is needed to account for the possibility of injuries.

Junior Ariadna Cairo Baza was held out of a match during the tournament for precautionary reasons with what Anderson called a “slight muscle pull” but expects Baza to be fine.

“After that North Texas match, I feel like we need to get a little bit deeper throughout our lineup so that we’re prepared when we have injuries,” Anderson said. “It exposes your weaknesses when you play good teams like that. It helps you plan the practices for the next week.”

The team plays next against Eastern Illinois University Friday in Danville.

SWIM

The women swam half the distance of the normal events since their conference championship is two weeks away, but it did not stop Benitez from adding three more wins to her swimming resume.

Benitez won the 500-yard and 250-yard freestyle races individually and also swam the first leg of the 100-yard freestyle relay. Sophomore Helena Amorim finished in second place for both the 500-yard and 250-yard freestyle races. Benitez said she was extremely proud of Amorim because she cares about the sport.

“I know she works really hard,”

Benitez said. “I practice with her and I can see that she has that swimmer mentality about getting better.”

Benitez helped lead SIU’s women to a win with a score of 156.5 to 86.5.

The men’s conference tournament is three weeks after the women’s, so they swam the full distances Saturday. Walker said he was pleased with how SIU’s men competed. He said they are at a phase where they are not well rested, but they are not tired either, so their results could vary.

“When their bodies are asked to go really fast or compete, it responds awkwardly sometimes,” Walker said.

The Saluki senior men were lucky they were not models on a runway.

Seniors Eddy Lynk and George Minkel both slipped and fell on the tile toward the end of the tunnel when they were being recognized.

“It actually hurt a little bit,” Minkel said. “I’m just really glad my mom didn’t see me fall.”

Minkel said even though the fall hurt, it did not affect his performance.

Individually, Minkel finished third in the 50-yard freestyle and second in the 100-yard freestyle to contribute seven points to the Saluki men’s 186 to 45 win.

“It was the last dual meet in my competitive career,” he said. “To do it with a great group of people is a great way to go.”

The Saluki diving teams swept all four events. The women had the top three finishers in the 1-meter and 3-meter dives. Senior Brittany Weigel finished third in both events.

“I did a couple of dives that were very new for me,” she said. “They’re some of the hardest dives I’ve ever done, and I knocked them out.”

After the final dive, all diving members of SIU and Evansville huddled together and cheered each other on. Weigel said the two teams have always gotten along, and they were all congratulating each other’s seniors.

“We respect them a lot,” she said. “They’ve always been friendly competition for us and we love them.”

Weigel said her final regular season meet could not have gone any better.

The women will host the Missouri Valley Conference championships beginning Feb. 13 in the Dr. Edward J. Shea Natatorium. The men will travel to Buffalo, N.Y., to compete in the Mid-American Conference championships beginning March 6.

Walker said this season’s group of seniors is irreplaceable.

“I’ve been doing this here for 27 years, and not a year goes by that makes it any easier,” he said. “You invest in them, you council them, you prepare them. So to watch them swim and put in their best efforts was really nice to watch.”

Saluki Hall of Fame adds six members

TYLER DIXON
Daily Egyptian

More than 260 people have been inducted in the Saluki Hall of Fame since 1978, but Friday evening, five athletes and one coach were added to the prestigious group.

A committee of unidentified members chose the six. Four sports had representatives in the hall.

The six Salukis added to the wall were Jerry Kill, Mark Gagliano, Mickey Maule, Brittany Riley, Joe Schley and Amarachi Ukabam.

The most notable addition was former Saluki head football coach and current University of Minnesota Head Coach, Jerry Kill. Kill led the Salukis from 2001-2007, achieving a 55-32 record Kill said whenever he would bring recruits to SIU, he would take them by McAndrew Stadium at night and would not even show them the stadium during the daytime.

"Nobody understands what we

"It's the best SIU has to offer ... To be included in that is humbling."

— Mark Gagliano
former SIU football player inherited here," Kill said. "Nobody unless you were here, because that old stadium was not good."

Kill had two quarterbacks during his tenure. Joel Sambursky and Nick Hill were the leaders of Kill's offense; Kill said he was excited to see Hill be named to the staff at SIU.

"I think that's a great move for Coach Lennon, it's going to help the program," he said. "I believe that with all my heart."

When Kill gave his speech, he brought his former coaching staff to the lectern and said this was not only his honor, but theirs too.

Kill, along with former punter Mark Gagliano, brought something different to the Saluki football team when they were members. Gagliano was a punter for SIU from 1993 to 1996 and won as many awards on the field as he did off. Along with being a two-time All-Gateway Conference performer, he was also a three-time Gateway All-Academic team member.

Seniors recall time lapse before final laps

AARON GRAFF
Daily Egyptian

The senior swimmers and divers were honored Saturday before jumping in the pool for their last regular season meet against the University of Evansville Purple Aces.

Prior to the meet, 16 seniors received recognition from fans, coaches and teammates to celebrate their time as a Saluki. The remaining undergraduates formed a tunnel for the seniors to walk through before being greeted by Athletic Director Mario Moccia, Chancellor Rita Cheng, the coaching staff and a teammate to give them a rose, a gift bag and a balloon.

The Salukis won 23 of 26 events and tied for first in the women's 50-yard backstroke. SIU's men won all 13 events.

Senior Pamela Benitez was one of the first names called for recognition. Freshman Andy Ross was announcing the seniors career high points and statistics, and Benitez has achieved enough accomplishments in her career that it brought tears to her eyes when Ross was naming them.

"I don't have words to tell how many emotions I had," Benitez said.

ROBERT OLSON • DAILY EGYPTIAN

Swimmers from SIU and Evansville University compete in the backstroke Saturday at the Edward J Shea Natatorium. Both SIU men's and women's swim and diving teams won their respective meets, with the men winning 186-45 and the women 156.5-86.5. The meet was the last for both the Salukis and Aces this year before they compete in their conference championship meet later this month.

Sophomore guard Anthony Beane drives to the net Saturday during the Salukis' 81-76 victory over Loyola University Chicago at SIU Arena. Beane finished with a career-high 27 points in the overtime win.

Salukis anticipate home meet

SYMONE WOOLRIDGE
Daily Egyptian

After grabbing four event titles at the Indiana Relays last weekend, the SIU track team will get a chance to compete at home Friday and Saturday.

Some Salukis say they enjoy competing at home, while others prefer away meets.

Junior distance runner Krista Menghini said it's exciting to race at home but she enjoys traveling to compete at other schools.

"It's just a different experience," she said. "It's fun to race in new places and explore. It's fun to see new campuses but it's also fun to be at home in a place that is familiar to us."

The track and field team has not competed at home since Jan. 11, but the Salukis have been competing well, and finished with personal best records in every meet.

The Salukis captured three of their four event titles and two runner-ups on the first day of Indiana Relays.

Menghini claimed the first title for SIU. She finished first in the 3,000-meter run, sprinting to a winning time of 9:56.37.

The Saluki entered the SIU history books, completing the race with the ninth-best time in school history.

Menghini said she came into the race with two goals: Her first was to beat 10 minutes; the second was to be more aggressive with her racing strategy and tactics. Menghini accomplished both.

"My coaches told me to believe in my training and to believe in myself because they believe in me," she said. "And with running, a big part of it is mental."

Coach Connie Price-Smith said Menghini has been gaining a lot of confidence and has been trying to run her own style.

"There are times where she does show a lack of confidence," Price-Smith said. "But the better she competes, the more confidence she has, and I think she is doing a great job of that right now."

This is the third consecutive away competition for SIU, and Price-Smith said the Salukis have been doing a good job of working hard despite being away from home.

She said home meets may be more relaxed while road competitions are a little more structured.

"You get there and have to make sure you're getting rest, which is a different routine than at home," she said. "But when you're at home, you have classes to go to and you get to sleep in your own bed, so it may just be a bit more relaxed."

The two other Salukis who finished with event titles were sophomore thrower Alexus Scott and sophomore high jumper Kemar Jones.

Scott's throw landed her in the seventh spot in SIU history and 33rd nationally. Scott threw 55 feet, which put her at fourth in the Missouri Valley Conference.
